NOW BERVILE INSURESCTION IS TO

ER AVOIDED.

If servile insurrections can be avoided at all, as a consequence of a civil war carried on in the presence of slaves, it will be by the legislation of Congress, by the proclamation of the President, and by the proper conduct in obedience thereto of our generals in the field. The negroes who are offered liberty by legal methods, who are guaranteed in its possession by the supreme national authority, and who are proripreme national authority, and who are provided (temporarily) with the means of subsistence in military employment and under military surveillance, will have no temptation to recover their freedom by violence and bloodrecover their freedom by violence instead shed. Servile insurrection is prevented instead tion, or by the legislation of which that proclation was the logical supplement and enlarge-ment. It is because the negroes are patiently proach of the first day of January, that they do proach of the first day of January, that they do not break out into open revolt. And when liberation comes, it is the recognition of their liberty as a legal fact by our generals, which restrains them within safe bounds.

restrains them within asfe bounds.

It is thus quite as much a matter of mercy to the whites of the South, as to the blacks, that the Government should continue its present policy of exercising a temporary control over the liberated negroes, and of providing temporarily for their orderly maintenance. It is in this way, that the transition of the race slavery to freedom may be made without of disorder. Nothing can prevent this desirable consummation, except the success of such mad teachings as those of the Louisville Jourthat white men cannot, and will not, live with black men, except as their owners and masters. If this horrible and demoniac spirit, tending directly to a war of extermination be races, can be kept down, all will go

But, let it never be forgotten, that a withirawal of the President's proclamation would be the signal for an universal negro outbreak at away their last hope of the peaceful acquisition of liberty, and they would then be thrown large reinforcements already sent to General upon the terrible resources of despair. The proclamation will stand, and servile war will thus be prevented, if, in-deed, its prevention is not rendered impossible me conduct of the rebels, who will, sauredly, fall victims to it, if it occurs,
